

Cub Scouts visit Crete News
by Leesa K. Bartu

The Exeter Cub Scout Pack 218 visited the Crete News office in October. The scouts toured the facility to learn how they make the newspaper.

Managing Editor Josh Wolfe led the tour starting at the front door. Wolfe showed the group his office first. He showed the boys how he makes the front page on his computer.

Wolfe told the Scouts that, "The front page is the last thing to go together but usually the most planned."

From there the Scouts looked at the dark room and then on to the printing press. The press was a 1974 King Press that had a four primary color chamber added in 2001.

The boys learned that they have to print 300 copies of the newspaper before the color lines up right.

The Tiger Cubs are required to learn about communication by visiting a newspaper office, radio station, or a television station and the Webelos scouts are required to write a newspaper story.

The boys enjoyed watching the printing press the best.
