

Exeter-Milligan celebrate 100 days of school
by Leesa K. Bartu

The Exeter-Milligan Kindergarten through Second Graders celebrated the one-hundredth day of school on Wednesday, January 23rd.

The First Grade class has the biggest celebration because they are counting up to one hundred now. Their teacher, Mrs. Sharon Lott, had lots of one hundred activities planned for them. They made necklaces in patterns with fruit cereal, they created their own project with one hundred of the same items, and they baked a cookie with one hundred candies in it.

They also made a trip to the Exeter Care Center to sing a few songs celebrating one hundred days in school.

The Kindergarten class is just "starting to understand what one hundred of something looks like," according to teacher Mrs. Judy Kassik. They made necklaces of one hundred fruit cereals and had show and tell with one hundred of the same item they brought from home. They had so many one hundred activities they had to hold some for the next day.

At the end of the day all three classes gathered in the hallway to stomp on one hundred balloons. Each student took one balloon to start with and then they finished off the rest. Although the day was very cold and windy, throwing a party to celebrate one hundred days of school made the day very special.
